Cultural Consideration

For those of you visiting Nepal, we recommend cultural information to help you adjust and feel comfortable:

The dress code is very important for men and women while travelling in Nepal. Men and women should wear pants instead of shorts when travelling to Kathmandu. It doesn't matter for men in waistcoats, but they shouldn't be naked. Women need to try to be as humble as possible

Hindus people are concerned about the practice contamination of food when it is touched by someone outside of their caste or religion. Therefore, do not touch any exposed cooked food and, when drinking from a container used by others, avoid touching your lips. Do not eat with your left hand and be sure to give or receive food only with your right hand. Shoes are considered degrading, so keep them on the ground and take them off before putting your feet on anything. If you enter a Nepalese house, follow the example of your host to decide to remove your shoes, but when you enter a temple or monastery, you must remove them.

You will pass Buddhist walls, chortens and Buddhist stupas along the way, and follow local traditions, and should turn them to your right.
